

A Christmas Celebration

Narrator: In Star's house lives star and her two friends: Christmas tree and Present. They love Christmas and fight to be the most Christmassy.

Present: Look at me! I am the most Christmassy because presents are given at Christmas time.

Star: No, I think I am the most Christmassy because I am super shiny and Christmas cards always have got a star.

Present: You can see stars all year long, but presents are only around for celebrations like Christmas.

Christmas Tree: HA HA HA! You both are not as Christmassy as me! Christmas is in my name!

Narrator: A little robin flies by.

Robin: Hello! I have three special invitations for you. We will celebrate Christmas all together.

CT: Robin, what do you think? Which of us is the most Christmassy?

R: I don't know. I think you are all important to Christmas. Why are you fighting?

Narrator: Stocking was hidden and enters now.

Stocking: HA HA HA I knew it! There is no winner here. We are all special.

The robin flies away.

CT: Even if this is not a competition, we can decide who is the most Christmassy.

Narrator: All of the Christmas characters continue chatting and gather up the ornaments to decorate. Elf and angel are discussing which color lights to use.

Elf: Green is the best color to use!

Angel: No, I think white is better!

Narrator: Santa Claus enters annoyed.

SC: This is Christmas time, not time for fighting. Let's use both green and white lights.

Narrator: The robin arrives with a reindeer. To make everyone happy, the reindeer brought Christmas cookies to share.

Reindeer: No more fighting! Who wants a cookie?

Snowman: MMM, they are really tasty!

The bell rings with joy to the tune of jingle bells.

Christmas Tree, Star, and Present all say: YAY! It is time for us to celebrate Christmas!

They all run to Santa's house. When they get there, however, they still want to know who is the most Christmassy and ask Santa to make the final decision.

Santa: Attention, please! The results are in and...everyone wins! We need you all for our celebration to be the best because Christmas is about sharing and being together, not fighting.

Santa gives them each a little present. The bell sings another song because she is so happy. The characters all begin to laugh and celebrate together.
